Description of the lecture

The lecture focused on the issue of parents' awareness of their children's risky behaviour online, which is a highly relevant societal issue.

In the introduction, Mgr. Lenka Dědková Ph.D. presented the ways in which the internet has changed close interpersonal relationships, and the impact of these changes on the development and parenting of adolescents. She then explained the central concept of her research — parental mediation — and outlined its possible forms. In the next section, she presented the results of her research into what information parents have about their children's behaviour online, and how this influences their approach to raising children in the field of information and communication technologies. Finally, she summarised the most important findings of her research and offered recommendations for how parents should approach their children's online behaviour. The final part of the lecture consisted of a discussion with the audience.

Evaluation of the Lecture

Mgr. Lenka's Dědková Ph.D. presentation was systematic, progressing from general topics to more detailed and specialised issues. It was clear and well structured. The level of expertise chosen was appropriate for the target audience of the professional public. She made effective use of practical examples, and the individual parts of the presentation flowed logically into one another to form a coherent whole. Her presentation style was engaging and interactive, with sensitive use of humour. Mgr. Lenka's Dědková Ph.D. professional expertise was also evident in her responses to questions from the audience on a variety of topics.

Conclusion

The lecture delivered by Mgr. Lenka Dědková, Ph.D., entitled Parental awareness of online risks and delivered as part of the habilitation procedure, demonstrated sufficient scholarly qualifications and pedagogical capabilities expected of applicants participating in a habilitation procedure procedure in the field of Social Psychology.
